ADHD, Executive Function & Homework

Brenda Mann MA ED is a teacher with over 25 years of experience in public and private schools. Her business, Academic and Behavior Consultants, offers Academic Coaching, School Advocacy, and Parent/Educator Training on brain-based disorders. A majority of her students have ADHD, as well as, dyslexia, anxiety, depression, autism, and other brain-based disorders.

Students with ADHD often have many reasons why school can be such a challenge. Executive Function can be a major source of the problems related to homework issues. Proper parent support is necessary when executive function is an issue.

Brenda will discuss the issues related to executive function and homework: What is the parents' role, the school's role, and the student's role in homework success?
